Title: Emerging Trends in Polity, Economy, and Society
(Peer-reviewed edited volume with ISBN)

Scope and Themes

This interdisciplinary volume seeks to analyse evolving dynamics in polity, economy, and society, emphasising their interconnectedness in shaping contemporary global realities. We invite theoretical, empirical, and policy-oriented contributions across:

- 1. Polity
 - ✓ Sub-themes: Democratic backsliding, populism, digital governance, human rights, transnational institutions, conflict resolution, electoral reforms, and the role of civil society in authoritarian contexts. Any other theme related to Political Sciences and Public Administration.
- 2. Economy
 - ✓ Sub-themes: Globalization's uneven impacts, sustainable development, gig economy, post-pandemic recovery, automation's labor implications, wealth inequality, and ethical frameworks for resource allocation. Empirical and theoretical studies in broader field of Economics.
- 3. Studies related to Society
 - ✓ Sub-themes: Urbanization, migration crises, identity politics, cultural hybridity, social stratification (race, gender, class), mental health in hyper-connected societies, and technology's role in community-building or alienation. Empirical and theoretical studies in broader field of Sociology.
- 4. Interdisciplinary Intersections
 - ✓ Polity & Economy: Policy responses to climate change, lobbying and corporate power, welfare-state reforms.
 - ✓ Economy & Society: Poverty cycles, consumer culture, ethical capitalism.
 - ✓ Polity & Society: Social movements, civic tech, media's role in democracy.
