Editorial Note

Volume I, Issue II – Académique Journal of Quality
Exegium Scholarly Press

This second issue of our journal brings together a wide spectrum of interdisciplinary scholarship that bridges tradition, development, and sustainability. The articles reflect ongoing academic engagement with the complexities of regional identity, economic transformation, environmental stewardship, and holistic well-being. The volume opens with an exploration of traditional institutions and cultural continuity within an indigenous community, offering insight into how heritage can endure amid modern change. Moving to the financial sector, another study assesses the restructuring of rural banking in India, analyzing how institutional mergers impact inclusivity and rural credit delivery.

Industrial development is examined through the lens of MSMEs and government subsidies, highlighting the role of policy in regional economic growth. A broader perspective on entrepreneurship is also included, evaluating national initiatives aimed at fostering innovation and addressing systemic challenges within India's start-up ecosystem.

Environmental concerns are addressed through a review of butterfly diversity in Northeast India, emphasizing the region's ecological richness and the importance of conservation. Finally, a multidisciplinary framework on sustainable detoxification links emotional wellness with ecological practices, integrating traditional knowledge with contemporary health paradigms.

Together, these contributions underscore the journal's aim to promote research that is regionally grounded, thematically diverse, and globally relevant.
